Drivers

The numerous benefits offered by collagen in the food and beverage industry

Collagen is used in confectionery products to improve chewiness, foam stability, and texture. It is used as a texturizing and stabilising agent in dairy products. Furthermore, it acts as a binding agent for nutritional bar ingredients and improves the softness and flexibility of nutritional bars. As a result of the numerous functionalities provided by collagen, its use in the food industry has increased. It is also used to treat malnutrition and specific absorption and digestion disorders. In terms of value sales, these factors are expected to drive the growth of the collagen market.

Growing application of collagen in the personal care industry

Collagen fibres in human skin deteriorate over time, losing its thickness and strength, resulting in skin ageing. Collagen is used in cosmetic creams as a nutritional supplement for bone regeneration, cartilage regeneration, vascular and cardiac reconstruction, skin replacement, and soft skin augmentation, among other things. Collagen is an ingredient found in many soaps, shampoos, facial creams, body lotions, and other cosmetics. Hydrolysed collagen is a key component in skin and hair care products. In the personal care industry, hydrolysed collagen is combined with surfactants and active washing agents in shampoos and shower gels.

Opportunity

Changing lifestyles, food habits, adoption of western food habits, an increase in demand for functional ingredients in food products, and an increase in industrial activity necessitating process enhancement have all contributed to the growth of the collagen market in emerging economies. Emerging economies offer excellent opportunities for market growth. Due to rising global consumption, market stakeholders from various countries have been working tirelessly to increase production of collagen. Manufacturing companies in the food and beverage sector are using a strategic approach to generate lucrative revenue opportunities.

Recent developments

Darling Ingredients' EnviroFlight brand opened a new R&D and Corporate Center in Apex, North Carolina, in April 2021. This new R&D facility will allow for a greater focus on specific research areas, such as expanding the knowledge base for alternative uses of black soldier fly larvae (BSFL) in animal health, animal nutrition, cosmetics, and other product development.

GELITA USA opened its new collagen peptide unit in March 2021, a 30,000-square-foot production unit at the complex's southeastern end in the Port Neal industrial area near Sioux City, Iowa. This expansion is primarily driven by GELITA's collagen peptides' double-digit market growth, particularly in the health and beauty markets, which shows no signs of abating in the near future.

At the virtual Beauty & Skincare Formulation Conference 2021, Rousselot, a Darling Ingredients brand that produces collagen-based solutions, launched MSC-certified marine collagen peptides: Peptan. This ingredient is derived from 100% wild-caught marine white fish and is certified by the Marine Stewardship Council (MSC). It is primarily used in premium nutricosmetics and dietary supplements. The ingredient is manufactured in France by Rousselot and is available worldwide. The rising new product developments with collagen sourced from wild-caught ocean fish, as well as the rising demand for fish collagen beauty and dietary supplement products, are the major driving factors behind the launch.
