Global Kitchen Compost Market

Kitchen compost known as a green-waste caddy bin is used to store your food scraps indoors for a few more days before you dispose them outdoors into a compost system. FOGO programs have been implemented in several states and territories to reduce landfill. Currently, around 30% of households have access to full FOGO collection services. According to the Australian government's National Waste Policy Action Plan, FOGO will be provided to all households and businesses. Some councils will give small kitchen caddy to residents at no cost (any lidded container will do), but there are other attractive options, which CHOICE tested.
