COVID-19 Impact Organic Dried Distiller's Grain Market

Most countries have imposed lockdown or transportation restrictions, which have a negative impact on production due to lower labour footfall. Furthermore, the lockdown caused by consumer panic-buying has contributed to an increase in pet food sales and production. This pattern, however, is not expected to continue after the lockdown, and it will have an impact on manufacturing, retail, and other industries. In these times of crisis, feed producers and suppliers are doing everything possible to ensure that feed is available to all processing animals while adhering to protocols to protect their employees from COVID-19 and maintain productivity.

Recent Development

ADM will open its new animal nutrition laboratory in Rolle, Switzerland, in November 2021, in the heart of the Swiss Food & Nutrition Valley. The new lab will aid in developing science-based feed additives to meet the needs of pet food, aquaculture, and livestock species worldwide.

De Heus Vietnam signed a strategic agreement with Masan in November 2021, after which De Heus obtained complete control of MNS Feed's feed-related business. MNS Feed's feed business includes thirteen animal feed mills with a total production capacity of nearly 4 million tonnes, bolstering De Heus' position in Southeast Asia's largest animal feed market.

Royal DSM will open its new Analytical Center of Excellence in Tulln, Lower Austria, in October 2021. The facilities will be used to conduct nutritional analyses, which will serve as the foundation for farmers to drastically improve livestock nutrition, health, and sustainability.
