Reed Hartley, TLI Executive Director, says, “We are excited to have David Bither join us with his deep expertise in advanced and emerging technologies, real-time analytics, AI (Artificial Intelligence), Machine Learning and Deep Learning. He helps organizations solve their most daunting problems by rapidly creating actionable information from raw data. A data strategy must be focused on producing the specific outcomes needed by the organization.”

For example, the optimum mix of AI and Machine Learning algorithms and Deep Learning models produces actionable intelligence that outperforms many legacy systems by over 300%. This capability focused approach leads to decision-makers in healthcare with optimized datasets to make better conclusions.

Highlights of his work include receiving a grant of a Federal Rapid Innovation Fund license for AI Machine Learning research and the annual science award for innovative technology for his design of remote sensing systems. David also co-founded and served as chairman of an international consortium for the development of advanced data technology.
