The rising construction industry around the world is driving the global lime industry. The construction industry is rapidly expanding, especially in developing economies such as India and China. The expansion is aided by the rising economies of the countries and their increasing populations.

To meet the population's housing demand, these regions are witnessing an increase in construction activity. Moreover, recent anti-dumping tariff policies in the United States, as well as new regulations in China, are affecting the steel industry, which would help the lime industry expand further in the coming years.

Industry Definition and Major Segments

Lime is a calcium-containing inorganic mineral that is mainly made up of oxides and hydroxides, most commonly calcium oxide and calcium hydroxide. It is also the term for calcium oxide, which is found in volcanic ejecta as a byproduct of coal-seam fires and in altered limestone xenoliths.
