A prosthetic full arch denture is a detachable acrylic replacement for teeth and bone loss in a whole dental arch. Complete dentures are generally inexpensive, simple to make and repair, and offer a level of aesthetics and functionality that many patients find acceptable. Patients frequently express dissatisfaction with denture retention and the loss of chewing abilities that they had with their natural teeth whereas dental prosthetics are artificial teeth that are used to replace or repair missing or damaged teeth. Implant-supported bridges are very similar to traditional bridges.
