

Accident.com found that the most dangerous time to drive is between 12:00pm and 6:00pm

In new survey, 75 percent of auto accidents occurred when people were commuting to and from work

NEW YORK, NEW YORK, UNITED STATES, September 7, 2022

/EINPresswire.com/ -- When are car crashes more likely to happen?

According to a recent survey conducted by Accident.com, which specializes in connecting car accident victims with personal injury attorneys, the most dangerous time to drive is between 12:00pm–6:00pm. Over the past two years, the number of crashes has been increasing, and accidents have become more deadly, with multi-vehicle crash numbers rising.

A DISTURBING TREND

According to the Federal Highway Administration, 1.33 fatalities occurred per one million miles traveled in 2021. There are a few different possible reasons for this increase in traffic deaths, including driver error and inattention. The pandemic also seems to have increased deaths linked to speeding, with 11,258 fatalities in 2020, and it is likely that drivers are still driving recklessly now that more people are back on the roads. Road congestion and inadequate road design are also contributing factors, especially during peak driving hours.

WHEN IS THE MOST DANGEROUS TIME TO DRIVE?

To collect data on dangerous drive times, Accident.com surveyed drivers who were involved in a crash to find out when their accidents took place. The research sample consisted of 193 participants between the ages of 21 and 99 and was representative of drivers across all age groups, genders, and geographical regions in the U.S., with a margin of error of +/- 7.372 percent.

Afternoon and early evening commutes were reported to be the most dangerous, with 40 percent of respondents reporting accident times between 12:00pm–6:00pm. Morning commutes followed closely behind, with 35 percent of respondents reporting an accident between 6:00am–12:00pm. Only 20 percent of drivers surveyed were involved in an accident between 6:00pm–12:00am, and just under four percent of drivers reported accidents in the early morning hours between 12:00am–6:00am.
