Market Drivers:

The increasing prevalence of respiratory disorders, rising automation in the field of healthcare, and increasing adoption of inorganic growth strategies such as acquisitions, mergers, collaborations, and others by key players operating in the market, are the major factors that are expected to drive growth of the global spirometer market over the forecast period.

For instance, according to the statistics provided by the World Health Organization (WHO), in 2019 around 262 million people suffered from asthma globally, thus making asthma one of the major non-communicable disease which can affect both adults as well as children.

However, dearth of global standardization in the Spirometer market all over the world is likely to hamper growth of the global Spirometer market over the forecast period.

Market Challenges:

The epidemic of Covid-19 pandemic adversely impacted several industries. The virus outbreak in China spread across more than 100 countries around the world due to which many countries announced stringent lockdown regulations across nations in order to curb the virus spread. Several industrial operations were disrupted during this period as many businesses were closed down. The pandemic negatively impacted many markets including the one in discussion as product demand and sales significantly declined during the pandemic. However, as the pandemic situation goes back to normal, the market is likely to regain growth.

Market Outlook:

The global spirometer market is expected to exhibit a CAGR of 9.5% over the forecast period, owing to growing number of product launches and regulatory approvals. For instance, in August 2020, Vitalograph, a U.S. based respiratory diagnostics company received the U.S. FDA 510(k) clearance for its newly developed handheld spirometer named as In2itive e-Diary.
