COVID-19 scenario analysis:

Aircraft refurbishing market might be among those exceptions of industries which are surviving despite COVID-19 pandemic, even more demand is expected to soar post pandemic.

Aircraft refurbishing market as a whole was still in profitable situation yet many segments within this industry too are facing as much difficulty as any other industry.

Many aircraft companies have started offering communications and imaging services that contribute to national security, while providing critical communication connectivity that is of paramount importance to a society in a safe harboring mode — and therefore may warrant additional support from governments.

Support from government side is increasing, as the global health crisis has forced an emergency sort of situation throughout the globe, and without government incentivization, it would be complicated for industry to initiate any new project.
