HW Insiders Winner

Winners of HW's Insiders accolade represent a wide range of occupations within the housing economy, from lending and real estate to fintech. According to HW, Insiders are the internal professionals that their companies turn to with their most important or challenging behind-the-scenes projects, and their contributions and hard work lead to superior results.

Among some of Ales' key contributions were his assistance in developing DocMagic's e-Eligibility solution, eDecision™. He also added functionality to DocMagic's loan generation solution that supports the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) for the visually impaired to read mortgage loan documents. In addition, Ales worked on the Affordable Housing Initiative (AHIT) for Freddie Mac that helped create first-ever instruments to include subordinate liens.

And always at the top of Ales' list of business-critical compliance initiatives is to move the mortgage industry toward going paperless. Looking ahead, Ales seeks to add compliance guidelines and functionality for use by Limited English Proficiency (LEP) borrowers to assist them in better interpreting loan documents.

"Each year, the HW Insiders award represents a versatile group of unsung heroes who are vital to the smooth functioning of their organizations," HousingWire Editor in Chief Sarah Wheeler said. "While they may operate behind the scenes, the tireless work of these honorees has a huge impact on the larger housing ecosystem. We are honored to recognize this impressive group of industry experts."
