-- Vermicompost is the product of the decay of organic waste, such as husks, leaves, weeds, stalks, etc. It also comprises fruit and vegetable scraps, animal waste, poultry litter, etc. These materials are decomposed by several species of earthworms that improve the procedure of organic waste conversion. Vermicompost acts as a rich source of nutrients and is employed as an organic fertilizer in the agriculture industry. It offers various benefits, including a better nutrient cycle, improved water holding capacity, and enhanced soil aeration. Vermicompost is also environment-friendly and reduces the volume of waste going into landfills.
