Key Trends In The Insurance Brokers Market

Nontraditional companies such as Google, Amazon, and Walmart are entering the insurance intermediary market to capitalize on their brand image, large capital, and customer base. Their primary focus is on the distribution of health, property, and casualty insurance products. In line with this trend, these companies are also entering into partnerships, joint ventures, and alliances with other established insurance carriers to offer insurance products and services to their customers.

Overview Of The Insurance Brokers Market

The insurance brokers and agents market consists of sales of insurance policies by entities (organizations, sole traders, and partnerships) and individuals that act as intermediaries (i.e., agents or brokers) in selling annuities and insurance policies. They represent consumers or insurance providers or both in insurance premium collection. Insurance brokers and agents can be contracted with single or multiple insurance companies as they try to meet different client needs with available insurance products. This market excludes the direct selling of insurance
