CHICAGO, IL, UNITED STATES,
September 13, 2022 /

EINPresswire.com/ -- Timothy Kelley, CEO of TeleRay, was recently named to the National Small Business Association (NSBA) Leadership Council. NSBA is the nation's oldest small-business advocacy organization and operates on a staunchly nonpartisan basis. Mr. Kelley, a recognized leader in the small-business community, joins the NSBA Leadership Council alongside other small-business advocates from across the country as they work to promote the interests of small business to policymakers in Washington, D.C.

Timothy Kelley

Born and raised in the Chicago area, Mr. Kelley, working for TDK, expanded CDs and DVDs as a format of exchange in radiology throughout North and South America and the European community. Upon leaving TDK, he founded his own radiological recording company Nautilus Medical to develop medical recording software. During this time, Mr.

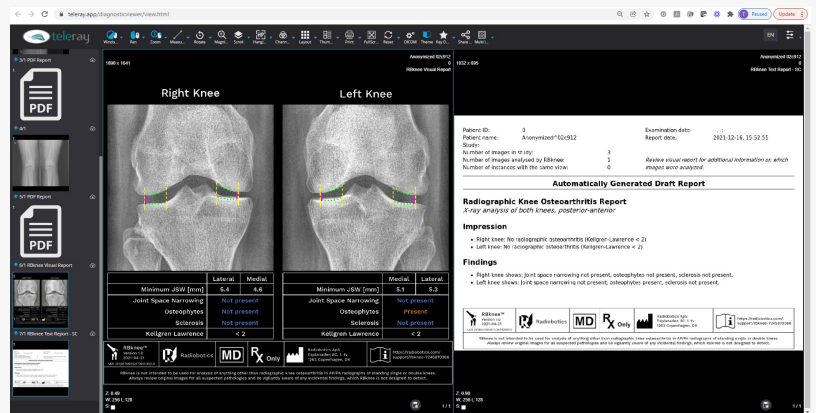

Kelley applied his experience with medical information recorded on CDs to develop a new business model of disseminating key information on a platform for medical professionals that include patient information from disparate EMR systems as a complete patient profile for exchange. After Nautilus, he formed TeleRay as a medical communications platform that connects image management, storage, results, and patient data through a telehealth network. TeleRay allows for face-to-face consultations while viewing images and results for consent with better understanding resulting in better outcomes.

Mr. Kelley joined the NSBA Leadership Council as part of his efforts to tackle the many critical issues facing small business, including tax reform, regulatory restraint, health care costs, and how access to capital will impact small business. The NSBA Leadership Council is focused on providing valuable networking between small-business advocates from across the country while ensuring small business a seat at the table as Congress and regulators take up key small-business proposals.
