EINPresswire.com/ -- Compression

therapy market has long been the treatment backbone for vascular management and the treatment of wounds resulting from venous insufficiency. Several benefits of compression therapy include management of edema and improvement of venous return.

However, many patients cannot tolerate the compression stockings and bandages commonly used in this therapy.

The compression therapy market is expected to be dominated by compression garments. This is primarily due to the widespread use of compression garments for a variety of causes including varicose veins, edema, DVT, and lymphedema, as well as for the treatment of various chronic conditions. Data Bridge Market Research analyzes that the compression therapy market was valued at $3.0 billion in 2021 and is projected to reach $4.67 billion by 2029, and is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.7% during the forecast period of 2022 to 2029.
