Market Overview:

The rise in cancer cases, immune system problems, and viral infections are the main factors propelling the global biochips market's expansion. Increases in the elderly population, the number of biochip applications, and the widespread use of personalised medications are additional factors driving market expansion. However, barriers to market expansion include the high cost of biochips and widespread ignorance of them, particularly in developing countries. On the other hand, rising government funding, R&D investment, and the enormous potential of underserved markets in emerging economies are anticipated to create lucrative growth opportunities for the market.

However, dearth of global standardization in the Biochips market all over the world is likely to hamper growth of the global Biochips market over the forecast period.

Market Impact of Covid-19:

The epidemic of Covid-19 pandemic adversely impacted several industries. The virus outbreak in China spread across more than 100 countries around the world due to which many countries announced stringent lockdown regulations across nations in order to curb the virus spread. Several industrial operations were disrupted during this period as many businesses were closed down. The pandemic negatively impacted many markets including the one in discussion as product demand and sales significantly declined during the pandemic. However, as the pandemic situation goes back to normal, the market is likely to regain growth.
