MEDFORD, OREGON, UNITED STATES, September 14, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Health Tech Disruptor Evry Health Reshapes the Payer Landscape Assisted by PLEXIS Next-Gen CAPS Technology.

Evry Health, a new B2B health insurance company, has eliminated deductibles and co-pays by employing a smarter product design driving robust automation and enviable efficiency.

[Medford, Oregon – September 2022] PLEXIS Healthcare Systems, a leading healthcare payer technology company and innovator in next-generation digital core administrative processing solutions (CAPS), is excited to announce a successful activation of its Quantum Choice™ next-generation enterprise administration platform for Evry Health in the second quarter of 2022. The maverick business health insurance tech company has leveraged a proprietary hyperautomation approach, enabled by Quantum Choice, to orchestrate a suite of technologies empowering the efficient administration of a new health insurance designed to eliminate deductibles and co-pays.

Evry Health's operational model utilizes a composable IT architecture where components can be easily integrated and scalable as needed to enable their ecosystem to meet evolving market conditions as well as ever-changing regulatory requirements. Its componentized tech stack, supported by Quantum Choice, automates tasks related to claims, care coordination, underwriting and back-office operations, producing significant savings that are passed along to customers.

"We have all suffered under the current healthcare system. Whether that means experiencing a personal loss due to a misdiagnosis, enduring sleepless nights worrying about unpaid medical bills, facing the momentous battle of trying to get an insurance company to actually pay for something, or something else entirely, the team at Evry Health finds the current state of affairs profoundly unacceptable," said Evry's chief executive officer, Chris Gay. "This is personal, and we will work tirelessly to provide something better and believe our partnership with PLEXIS will enable us to do so.”

Evry Health chose Quantum Choice, augmented by its flexible data integration layer, to facilitate efficient real-time system-to-system integration. Quantum Choice effectively sets the foundation for significant componentization, interoperability, and scalability to meet growing membership, all while optimizing Evry Health’s IT ecosystem’s ability to integrate efficiently with other applications, legacy systems, and vendors.

“We are quite proud that Quantum Choice is enabling the business process management and workflow automation so critical to the important work that Evry Health is doing to provide a truly revolutionary insurance product,” said Sean Garrett, chief operating officer for PLEXIS Healthcare Systems. “We’re confident Evry Health’s composable architecture solution, supported by Quantum Choice, will play a key role in realizing their business objectives, both within the operations and information technology realms, as well as delivering on its mission to provide affordable and valuable group health insurance to its customers.”
