The speakers at Within Summit represent some of the most influential people in health across varying verticals, such as treatment, telehealth, marketing, and media. Speakers include activist and author, Schuyler Bailar, executive producer, Aalia Lanius, Within Health co-founders, Dr. Wendy Oliver-Pyatt and Abhilash Patel, and more. The Summit will house two tracks, one for healthcare professionals and students, which will highlight various evidence-based treatment modalities while working within a multidisciplinary team approach and educating providers about how to advocate for patient care across all populations. The second track offered is for media professionals and family members, which will work to advance media literacy competencies around mental health, eating disorders, and diversity. In addition, it educates attendees about both consuming and creating media safely, explores the role of design and technology in the future of care, and more.

Within Health was founded last year by serial healthcare founders Abhilash Patel and Dr. Wendy Oliver-Pyatt. The remote care company is licensed in over 30 states and has an entirely remote staff of 160 people and climbing.

"We launched Within Health because we saw a need for more flexibility in eating disorder treatment, greater access to care, and a broader understanding of disordered eating and all the populations impacted by it," said Abhilash Patel, Co-Founder, and President of Within Health, "Our Summit on eating disorder treatment and media literacy will help address those needs and more by bringing together the greatest changemakers from some of the most influential companies, publishers, and providers in the nation. We are incredibly proud of the community coming together around our common goals."
