Aircraft lighting is mainly installed on the exterior and interior parts of an aircraft. It relies on technologies, such as control circuits and switches and resistors to automate strobe, electro-luminescent, and incandescence lights. It assists in providing illumination for servicing, safety, operational needs, and convenience of passengers. It also aids in improving pilot visibility, identifying aircraft location, heading and position, and making aircraft visible to ground personnel.

Aircraft Lighting Market Trends:

Due to the expanding international trade and the growing travel and tourism sector, there is a considerable rise in the volume of air traffic across the globe. This represents one of the key factors bolstering the growth of the market. Apart from this, leading players are launching innovative aircraft lighting solutions for specific flight operations. This, along with the rising trend of urban air mobility (UAM), an on-demand, automated passenger, and cargo-carrying air transportation service is creating a favorable market outlook. The market is also propelled by extensive investments in aviation infrastructure worldwide.
