advancement in and around digital litigation. The collaboration coincides with a period of growth and investment in the company’s litigation and investigations business underscored by bringing on several well-known eDiscovery experts including Derek Duarte, Aaron Crews, Colleen Freeman and Warren Kruse.

“Doug Austin has built the go-to resource for professionals who need to understand trends, developments and cases impacting the entire spectrum of the electronic discovery landscape,” said Derek M. Duarte, Senior Vice President, Litigation at UnitedLex. “UnitedLex is thrilled to partner with him to help propel the industry forward as emerging technologies and challenges face practitioners seeking sound, practicable guidance.”

“UnitedLex offers an impressive array of solutions and services backed by a team with proven experience in addressing client challenges” said Doug Austin, Editor of the eDiscovery Today blog. “I’m eager to work with the UnitedLex team to leverage that knowledge to educate the legal community in best practices and the application of leading technology to improve and streamline legal process workflows.”

Recently, UnitedLex provided expert testimony in a case involving misappropriation of trade secrets in which a federal judge issued a rare default judgment for discovery abuses involving chat collaboration tools. Duarte’s expert forensic analysis unearthed a “smoking gun” that served as a deciding factor in the case, reinforcing the growing importance of digital forensic expertise in meeting discovery obligations.
