COVID-19 scenario analysis:

The global market for aerobatic aircraft is severely impacted by the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic. T

The COVID-19 pandemic saw a decline in the economic growth in almost all the major countries, thus affecting consumer spending patterns.

Owing to the lockdown implemented across various countries, national and international transport have been hampered, which has significantly impacted the supply chain of numerous industries across the globe, thereby increasing the supply-demand gap.

Moreover, OEMs and other raw material and spare parts manufacturers are unable to sell and manufacture products due to lockdown restrictions.

Thus, insufficiency in raw material supply is expected to hamper the production rate of aerobatic aircraft, which negatively impact the market growth.

However, this situation is expected to improve as government has started relaxing norms around the world for resuming business activities.

Top impacting factors: market scenario analysis, trends, drivers, and impact analysis:

There is a growing trend of aerobatic training among various armed forces around the world, because aerobatics enhances a pilot's ability to recover from unusual flight conditions, and thus is an element of many flight safety training programs for pilots. Therefore, aerobatics is taken for recreation as well as aerobatic competitions, a refereed sport.

Moreover, maneuvers performed by pilot are also considered significant in terms of gaining tactical knowledge. Maneuvers were found to allow aircraft to gain tactical advantage during aerial combat or dogfights between fighter aircraft.

In addition, many aircrafts can be used for both aerobatic and nonaerobatic or for general aviation purposes. Aerobatic aircraft such as Cessna 152 Aerobat, the R2160 Acrobin and others can be used for dual purposes: equipped to carrying passengers and luggage, as well as being capable of basic aerobatic figures.
