Anesthesia and Respiratory Devices Market Trends :

The elevating prevalence of asthma, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), tuberculosis, etc., among the masses, is primarily driving the anesthesia and respiratory devices market. Moreover, the expanding geriatric population, which is more susceptible to several respiratory disorders, and the escalating incidences of airborne infections are acting as significant growth-inducing factors.

Apart from this, the rising air pollution levels and the increasing number of smoking-related lung ailments, such as emphysema, bronchitis, cancer, etc., are also positively influencing the global market. Additionally, the inflating investments undertaken by the government bodies, especially in developing countries, to improve the healthcare infrastructure are further catalyzing the product demand.

Besides this, the shifting preferences toward minimally invasive (MI) surgical procedures among patients and healthcare professionals, the emerging trend of home care settings for improved patient care, and the growing focus among the leading market players in research and development (R&D) activities to introduce novel devices integrated with state-of-the-art technologies and enhanced diagnostics features are anticipated to propel the anesthesia and respiratory devices market over the forecasted period.
