

Family Law Firm In Denver Launches New Website

DENVER, CO, UNITED STATES, September 23, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Philip Goldberg PC, based in Denver, CO, recently launched a new website for his family law practice. The website is designed to provide more information to help Denver families cope with divorce, child custody, parental rights, property division, spousal maintenance, and many other issues.

At Philip Goldberg PC, the team understands the difficulty of family transitions. When a person must face family law issues, they need a trusted expert to help them find the best path to take. This means that every case is approached with care and clients are treated like family. The team believes that their compassion and extensive experience makes them one of Colorado's top family law firms, and many clients depend on them for expert guidance.

The new website provides a clear insight into the areas handled by the firm as well as additional information regarding such issues. One of the more common situations handled by the firm is divorce. Whether the individual in question is the spouse who filed for divorce or the spouse served with divorce papers, the law firm will help them maximize their financial independence and prepare for life after divorce. The team has extensive knowledge of Colorado divorce law and the interconnected issues related to the dissolution of marriage.

Legal Separation is also handled by the Goldberg firm. When couples decide they no longer wish to live together but do not want to divorce, they can pursue a legal separation. The court grants terms regarding child custody, child support, and property division. The lawyers at the firm will guide clients through the process to meet their needs and protect their interests. The firm also handles annulment cases. To quote the newly launched website, "An annulment (formally known as Declaration of Invalidity of Marriage) is a judicial decree declaring a marriage never existed. The court can grant an annulment for fraud or coercion in obtaining consent to marry or for other reasons. We help clients seek an annulment and present the required documentation to achieve a positive outcome." The firm is dedicated to ensuring the best possible outcome for all of its clients, regardless of the situation. Learn more here: Family Law Denver.

The firm handles a wide range of family law cases. Aside from divorce, legal separation, and annulment, the firm also handles cases for divorce appeals, post-divorce issues, parenting time and decision-making, and child support. All of these situations can take an immense toll on a client, and the firm's lawyers are dedicated to making the process as stress-free as possible (while working to establish a good outcome as well). The firm also represents individuals with cases concerning prenuptial agreements and postnuptial agreements, grandparent rights, paternity, adoption, contempt proceedings, and modification issues, which include issues such as terms of alimony or custody.
