Smith wrote and produced the track working with newest tech platform, Boomy, and tapped the young hot artists Stunna4Vegas and CBVZ.

Last month Stunna released his new album, Rae Rae's Son. The 12-track effort was led by previous records like "BMF" featuring Icewear Vezzo, "Pay Me To Speak," and the album's outro "Sad Song" featuring Spinnabenz. Most recently, however, was "Suspect," which served to set the tone for Rae Rae's Son with some "signature street-oriented subject matter." Previously the rising rhymer recently dropped tracks such as "Activated," "Go Nutz" with GetRichZay, "BIG 4 Flow," "Steel (MMKK)," "WTW," and "No Diss" with YRB Tezz and one called "Stand Off" feature DaBaby.

"It was cool workin with Mike, he's a talented dude and the song is fire!" Stunna4Vegas

"This song is about waking up to the illusion of life and the emptiness success can bring. Once you wake up to that, you can feel full with where you're at instead of longing to be somewhere else or yearning for more." CBVZ

'This Isn't Real Life' is the result of a collaboration between hip-hop icon Stunna4Vegas, super producer Mike Smith, and LA-based vocalist CBVZ - a trio who were all brought together by Boomy, a new music creation tool. Boomy is breaking barriers in the accessibility of music creation, it's used both by first-time music-makers and established artists. Boomy-generated sounds form the core that this song is created around, and is the community that brought these artists together.
