PORTLAND, ORAGON, UNITED STATES, September 28, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Automotive Airbag Silicone Market by Airbag Position (Front, Knee and Curtain/Side), Airbag Type (Cut-And-Sewn Seam-Sealed (CSSS) and One-Piece-Woven (OPW)), and Vehicle Type (Passenger Vehicle and Light Commercial Vehicle and Heavy Commercial Vehicle), and Electric Vehicle Type (Battery Electric Vehicle (BEVs) and Plug-in Hybrid Electric Vehicle (PHEVs) / Fuel Cell Electric Vehicle (FCEVs)): Global Opportunity Analysis and Industry Forecast, 2021-2030

An automotive airbag silicone is a vehicle occupants restraint system meant to give, soft cushioning and support for vehicle occupants during a collision. Ordinary airbags generate heat during deployment, which increases the risk of occupants being burned. Adding a silicone lining to the airbag can control this heat without the airbag ripping or tearing during deployment. Airbags treated with silicone coatings can also quickly deflate Compared with alternatives such as neoprene coatings after reaching the maximum inflation pressure and have additional benefits such as heat resistance and airbag protection. Furthermore, the excellent compatibility of silicone with widely used airbag fabrics such as nylon allows it to form a moisture-proof protective layer and remain chemically inert. These advantages are expected to drive demand for automotive airbags made from silicone-coated fabrics.
