The rising ageing population base worldwide and technological advancement and development in the healthcare industry are the major factor accelerating the growth of the biopharmacy market. Furthermore, rising adoption of biopharmaceutical drugs worldwide, less risk of side effects of biopharmaceuticals and ability of the biopharmaceuticals to treat different diseases are also expected to drive the growth of the biopharmacy market. However, stringent regulatory issues and the requirement of high investment in the development of a biopharmaceutical drug restrains the biopharmacy market, whereas, lack of proper reimbursement policies in the developing economies will challenge market growth.
