"The new Burriss Nisenbaum Curry & Lacy website reinforces the commitment of all of our firm's partners to provide the most passionate and aggressive representation for those individuals that have experienced violations of their civil rights, discrimination, police misconduct or brutality, or faced other circumstances brought on by the bad actions of others," said John L. Burriss,

(L-R) BNCL Partners Ben Nisenbaum, John L. Burriss, Ayana Curry, DeWitt Lacy

Burriss Nisenbaum Curry & Lacy

Founding Partner. He added, "Our partners and associates work tirelessly daily to represent and achieve justice for those in our communities without a voice."

In creating the new website, the firm's primary aim has been to create a graphically appealing and functional digital presence that streamlines information about the firm for fast and easy browsing, provides valuable information about the firm's work and practice areas, gives visitors highly valuable educational information, and provides a quick, easy process for new clients to contact the firm and inquire about representation.

About Burris, Nisenbaum, Curry & Lacy

Over the years, John Burris, Ben Nisenbaum, Ayana Curry, DeWitt Lacy, and associated counsel have represented everyday people and victims of police misconduct whose names have become synonymous with police reform, such as Rodney King, Oscar Grant, and Theresa Sheehan. The firm's attorneys have also represented several public officials and high-profile clients, including Earl Sanders, the former Chief of Police of San Francisco, the late recording artist Tupac Shakur, NFL player Keyshawn Johnson, NBA player Gary Payton, and Aaron Goodwin (former sports agent for NBA star LeBron James).

Burris Nisenbaum Curry & Lacy has been and will continue to be instrumental in social reforms of police policy, governing racial profiling, asphyxiation, canines, deadly force, tasers, in-custody deaths, and other inhumane practices. Their work has also changed police department protocols for crowd control tactics and handling the mentally impaired. Burris Nisenbaum Curry & Lacy has also been successful in identifying and rooting out police corruption and sexual abuse, including the Allen v. City of Oakland Federal Civil Lawsuit, U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California Case No. 3:00-cv-04599, an infamous civil rights lawsuit also known widely as the "Oakland Riders" case.

Burris Nisenbaum Curry & Lacy is a well-respected national leader in the area of civil rights law along with other related areas of law. Committed to serving the rights of all people, Burris Nisenbaum Curry & Lacy continues to grow and expand its impact nationwide. The firm currently has offices located in Los Angeles, California, and Oakland, California, but serves clients throughout the United States and around the world.
