

Demand for Clean, Reliable, and Continuous Power Supply Drives the Industrial UPS Market

ARC's new research report on the industrial UPS market shows continued growth in the market.

DEDHAM, MA, UNITED STATES, September 29, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- ARC's new research report on the industrial UPS market shows continued growth in the market. Emerging countries are aiming for high economic growth. Their demand for reliable and clean power is rising rapidly in both commercial and industrial sectors. Power failures are frequent, so every business should review its contingency and emergency power plans. This is where the UPS comes in. A UPS provides stored power, usually from batteries, but also from flywheel systems. UPSs provide protection from input power interruptions and provide short-term power in the event of a power failure. Installing a suitable UPS is a proactive and cost-effective decision. It helps ensure profitability and employee productivity during any type of power disruption. Doing so also avoids lengthy recovery periods and the need to re-input data.

"Industrial facilities cannot afford to have intermittent operations owing to power outages or poor power quality. Power quality and availability from the power grid will not be able to keep up with the rise of industrial production in developing and emerging countries. Adopting a manufacturing strategy that can withstand grid outages will become increasingly important. Industrial UPS solutions will become critical in all aspects of industrial production in these countries if they want to compete on a global scale," according to Siddhartha Maiti Market Analyst and key author of ARC's Industrial UPS Market Research Report.
