Investment today announced an optimal offering to meet the needs of its real estate syndication investors who want to take part in the trend of supplying multi-person housing for adults. Due to exorbitant housing and rental prices, there is now a growing demand for co-housing opportunities. Through syndication, Gatsby has put together multiple small investments from people and can aggregate the funds to build and buy properties. The company has a track record of excellent payouts and good returns to investors.

Gatsby Investment is known in the real estate industry because it is one of only a few firms to offer real estate syndication online for multi-family properties with large apartments that can accommodate multiple adults. Gatsby is also unique in that it offers shorter-term investment offerings than other syndicators in the market. A multi-family development can take 16-24 months with Gatsby. This stands in contrast to other syndication companies, which may require payback periods of seven years or more.

In addition, syndication is typically a more high-ticket sort of investment; however, Gatsby has provided a legitimate and profitable opportunity for smaller investors. With its strong niche, the firm enables good real estate returns despite roller coaster stock markets. Because of the co-living trend, adults are sharing spaces as roommates under the term, “co-living.” Gatsby is capitalizing on the trend to innovate and build bigger apartments with five bedrooms and bathrooms. This suits adults living together, yet gives people better comfort and privacy while still enabling them to pay less.

“Real estate historically generates higher-than-average returns and, since it’s backed by a physical asset, it’s less likely to be affected by market stock price fluctuation,” said a spokesperson for Gatsby Investment. “Unlike other asset classes, real estate can also help you hedge against inflation. Real estate syndication is an alternative investment type, similar to real estate crowdfunding. Capital is pooled from multiple investors, allowing people to access high-value real estate deals with a low minimum investment amount. Investors receive access to deals that would normally only be available to experienced, wealthy investors.
