The latest monitoring and secure sockets layer (SSL) technology employed by the company safeguards users' personal information and website traffic. The website use SSL, a commonly used security method, to establish an encrypted link and guarantee the privacy of all data exchanged between web servers and browsers.

This new website's navigation has been made simpler. The rapid client quote option makes it easier for website visitors to find the information they need. The new website has been reorganized, and its pages have been compressed to provide clients with the information they need fast

According to the company, the main objective of the new website design is to produce a more functional, user-centric, and responsive resource across all platforms and devices. The business wants to make it easier for its users to discover and find helpful information about shipping oversized and overweight freight across North America.

Vectra Heavy Haulers goes above and beyond when delivering its services are made up of:

- Open-deck trucking
- Over-dimensional hauling
- Freight transport
- Cross-border transportation
- Canadian heavy haul
- Logistics.

Some industries across North America that have trusted Vectra Heavy Haulers to move their equipment include oil and gas, construction, mining, manufacturing, forestry, and aerospace.

Because of its experience in moving oversized freight across North America, the company is familiar with all the laws and guidelines that must be followed while moving oversized cargo, reducing the likelihood of any unpleasant surprises while moving the time-sensitive goods. Vectra Heavy Haulers takes pleasure in employing highly skilled, experienced professional drivers aware of the difficulties and obligations involved in transporting oversized cargo. A thorough inspection of all the trucks and machinery each month ensures that everything performs as it should. This lowers the possibility of malfunctions and delays while the freight is transported.

The services offered by Vectra Heavy Haulers can be seen on the company's website, which describes the specific processes for each service. The company's website has a dedicated contact tab where visitors can fill in a form to get a quote, call to get the information or find the location to visit.
