Key Trends In The Geospatial Analytics Market

Technological advancements in geospatial analytics have emerged as a key trend shaping the geospatial analytics market outlook. Major companies operating in geospatial analytics are focused on developing advanced solutions to strengthen their position in the market. For instance, in July 2020, LuxCarta, a France-based digital mapping solution providing company launched the BrightEarth product line, a collection of specialized global geospatial products created from artificial intelligence technologies. Based on Sentinel-2 imagery, the initial releases comprise a worldwide cloud-free mosaic and corresponding 10-class land use/land cover (LULC).

Overview Of The Geospatial Analytics Market

The geospatial analytics market consists of sales of geospatial analytics products and services by entities (organizations, sole traders, and partnerships) that gather, display, and manipulate geographic information. Geospatial analytics uses a geographic information system (GIS) to manage and predict the phenomenon affecting the earth and its inhabitants.
