

PulseCon Las Vegas 2022 Lit a Fire to the Crypto Game, Wowing Attendees With What's Next in Tech

Presented by FreedomTV.info, Las Vegas' largest crypto event showcased the powerful potential of crypto, entertainment, NFTs, and more.

LAS VEGAS, NV, UNITED STATES, October 4, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- PulseCon Las Vegas 2022 successfully wrapped its Sept. event leaving its audience connected to some of the most prominent players in global finance, blockchain, and entertainment industries. As the launchpad for the largest airdrop in crypto history, the renowned Las Vegas World Trade Center stood as the home base for esteemed guests to learn, network, collaborate, and experience the bold future of financial tech.

Kicking off the conference, Las Vegas Mayor Carolyn Goodman expressed proudly, "Las Vegas is still the land of opportunity and excitement" - a "smart city" prioritizing technological advancement." Celebrities at her side included multi-platinum producer/pioneering music industry mogul and creator of the "New Jack Swing" genre Teddy Riley and his TV Personality daughter, Nia Riley, best known for Love & Hip Hop: Hollywood and Marriage Boot Camp: Reality Stars.

Thanks to PulseCon Las Vegas 2022 Founder Tony Salazar of freedomtv.info, the hybrid event ignited the game for developers, users, and crypto investors across the globe. He and the creators of PulseCon helped Hex Founder Richard Heart launch the PulseChain Network, enabling the trading of thousands of ERC20 tokens, along with the duplication of NFTs. The event also showcased additional cryptocurrency and cross-chain networks.
