According to the comprehensive research and deep study conducted by PMR, replacement of damaged pipes is mandatory and the demand for replacement has been on a steady rise over the past few years across the globe. This has, in turn, led to the considerable growth of the competitive pipes market. Moreover, significant demand for competitive pipes from water use and water withdrawal applications is set to positively impact the growth of the global competitive pipes market during the forecast period.

Competitive Pipes Sales Gaining a Boost from Thriving Electronics & Telecom Industry

Competitive pipes made of steel have become a popular choice for several industry verticals that register significant demand for competitive pipes. Concrete pipes also find applications in industrial and household sectors, as concrete piping can fail under electrolysis, corrosion, or scale build-up in areas where soil, water, or atmospheric conditions are aggressive.

Since many companies are expanding their presence by opening new operation centers across the globe, the electronics and telecommunication industry is experiencing prompt growth. The expansion of electronics & telecommunication has resulted in increased demand for pipelines to protect underground cables. This global expansion of the electronics and telecommunication industry is expected to fuel the demand for competitive pipes over the forecast period.
