The Cudjoe's were introduced to the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation team after completing the Gaithersburg-Germantown Chamber of Commerce's Pathways To Business Success Program - a program for women and minority entrepreneurs trying to take their business to the next level. During the program they met Stephen R. McDow II the then membership director.

Pathways helped us understand that information is power. And as a business owner, the power is in building relationships with those who hold the information.”

Stephen has relationships with leaders close to the organization and made the connection.

“I was happy to make the connection in order to help a small Black business position themselves for success,” said Stephen.

The results paid off. Immediately after the conference Mr. Henry A. Golatt, one of Dr. Cudjoe's students when he was a professor at the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff (an HBCU) reached out. Mr. Golatt, an inclusive small business advocate said, “I picked this up over the weekend while back in DC and it made me smile.” Attached to the quote was a picture of the one-ounce sample bag with their label.
