“As a US-centric software services firm, we felt a nearshore delivery/support organization would help us serve our customers better, giving them options. Our strategy of being a logo-driven, multi-geo software services company and customer interest in nearshore options are the primary business drivers behind launching Mexico operations. This could be the start of our expansion further south into LATAM” said Aho Bilam, President and

CEO.

“MethodHub’s global fulfillment model combined with immigration expertise would help us offer our customers cost-effective solutions in Mexico, and eventually, for the rest of LatAm” said Siva Pallapu, country head of MethodHub Mexico.

“Having a nearshore arrow in our quiver would be a key differentiator for customers asking for same time-zone services. MethodHub, with its Mexico launch becomes more of the global services company MNCs would like to do business with. Small enough to be nimble, big enough to be stable” said Rich Marino, Member of Board of Advisors
