The population health management (PHM) market is estimated to increase rapidly over the forecast period. Because of the complexity of care delivery and payment mechanisms, the demand for population health services that combine numerous capabilities is growing. Clinical, financial, and operational data can be processed through population health management (PHM) solutions, which can help enhance efficiency and patient care. Medical reimbursement is changing as a result of the increased emphasis on value-based payment (VBP) and Accountable Care Organizations in the health management program (ACOs). Furthermore, ACOs' greater embrace of population health solutions is due to the simplicity provided by value-based payment models.

Population Health Management (PHM) Market Dynamics Drivers

Increasing prevalence of chronic diseases

Chronic illness is a major driving force in the population health management sector. Patients go to hospitals for treatment of long-term ailments. In chronic illness cases, patient record maintenance and surveillance are critical. The demand for effective treatment has increased in recent years as a result of chronic sickness. Increased treatment demand necessitates additional healthcare management services.

Rise in the level of healthcare investments

Another important driver for the population health management industry is high healthcare investments. It is resulting in the deployment of healthcare information technology.

Furthermore, the rising geriatric population will act as a major factor influencing the growth of population health management (PHM) market. Increasing urbanization and increasing expenditure on healthcare infrastructure are the major market drivers that will further escalate the growth of population health management (PHM) market. Because of the rising prevalence of cardiological and neurological diseases, PHM is frequently used to provide continuous surveillance and care to patients. Additionally, the growing use of PHM solutions to enhance clinical outcomes for patients by offering access to medical information to healthcare professionals from a variety of medical specializations is boosting market growth.
