Citizant: IT & Business Modernization Solution for Federal Agencies

Jeff Redman inspires confidence in challenging situations, and his strong connections with customers and partners help strengthen and solidify our business,”

David Romola

Since joining the company in 2011 to lead several IRS IT modernization programs, Citizant's employees have rated Redman consistently as the company's best operations manager. With 30 years of experience in government and commercial IT programs, he is well-versed in a range of in-demand technologies and has developed outstanding customer relationships.

“Jeff was the clear choice to lead Operations for Citizant because he embodies our servant leadership values,” Romola said. “His big-picture thinking and his dedication to Citizant's employees and customers have contributed significantly to our growth at the U.S. Air Force, U.S. Space Force, Internal Revenue Service, and other federal financial regulatory agencies. Jeff inspires confidence in challenging situations, and his strong connections with customers and partners help strengthen and solidify our business.”

“I am honored to have the opportunity to serve and guide our Operations teams as we deliver leading-edge solutions to our customers,” said Redman. “I look forward to strengthening Citizant’s differentiated capabilities and delivery models and helping our program managers and delivery teams remain aligned with Citizant’s vision and values.”

Prior to joining Citizant in 2011, Jeff held a position at Lockheed Martin as a senior operations manager and program manager, providing program operational oversight for seven IRS projects and ensuring continued success for multiple project releases. He is a Certified Scrum Master (CSM) and Project Management Professional (PMP), with a degree in Computer Engineering from Texas A&M University.
