The new division will be known as Selah Outdoors, designed to support Selah's luxury outdoor products expansion. The Renaissance product line adds a new dimension to Selah's myriad of custom and unique offerings, which melds hundreds of design probabilities into a proprietary, Ai-driven technology platform.

Renaissance's products are found in residential homes and commercial venues across the country. The company has earned a reputation for excellence thanks to its use of high-quality materials, great manufacturing partnerships, and industry-leading innovations in design and engineering.

"Since Selah's inception, our goal is always to create the most innovative outdoor environments for our clients," said Tom Morris, Managing Partner & co-founder of Selah Pools & Spas. "Our relationship with Renaissance creates an opportunity to craft an even more holistic design-to-build experience with a sleek and durable product that remains true to our client expectations for unparalleled offerings."

The COVID-19 pandemic raised awareness of people's homes being their sanctuary. In many cases, there are thousands of square feet available to expand the home into their backyard. The current desire among consumers is for more compelling outdoor experiences.

“This is an excellent opportunity for two engineering and marketing driven organizations to broaden each other’s offerings,” said Christopher Noe, President of Renaissance Patio. “We are clearly in a new era of individuals enjoying their home’s outdoor spaces as much as the indoors, and Selah is one of the few companies that offers a complete “turn-key” backyard. We look forward to incorporating our products into Selah’s custom-design platform.”
