The company also provides advice on how best to structure its business to be excellent and thriving in the long term.

Rainbow Realty Group offers several financing options for the cannabis industry. These include:

- Sale-leasebacks allow you to buy or lease property from a bank and then sell it off for your new business to operate on. This is usually done with residential properties but can also be used for commercial real estate. This might be worth considering if you want more flexibility in how you use the space! You can utilize the cash invested in your property without incurring debt.
- Mortgages are essentially loans against property that companies in need of funds would take out with their banks (and often pay back over time). They'll give them all sorts of perks like lower interest rates than other types of loans might offer—it just depends on what kind of person you are! You also can retain an ownership interest in your property or finance a purchase option in your lease.

"We have helped dozens of people in need of capital for their cannabis ventures," says the spokesperson at Rainbow Realty Group. "We can help them by providing them loans at competitive rates."
