Plexiform neurofibromas are inherited genetic disorders resulting in developments of neurofibromas from multiple nerves and skin. Soft lumps on and under the skin are the common symptoms of plexiform neurofibromas. Plexiform neurofibromas result in increasing the chances of cancer in the patients.

Growing approval of new paediatric drugs is a major factor fostering the growth of plexiform neurofibromas treatment market. Rising expenditure on the development of healthcare infrastructure and upsurge in the outsourcing for drug development activities are other factors also fostering the growth of the market. Strong product pipeline and personal disposable income are some other indirect determinants that will create lucrative immunosuppressant market growth opportunities. Commercial tie-ups and acquisitions by the major key players will also push the market growth rate.

However, non-favourable reimbursement scenario in the developing and under developed economies will pose a major challenge to the market growth. Limited availability of treatment owing to the low prevalence rate of low prevalence of neurofibromatosis will further challenge the market growth rate. Difficulty in conducting clinical trials for the paediatric population will further derail the market growth rate.
