Buffalo Bill's House recently unveiled its newest attraction, the much anticipated "well" – a replica of the infamous well in the film where cinematic serial killer Buffalo Bill keeps his victims captive. Uncannily similar to the one featured in the climax of the film, the well has been recreated, and the granite replica well is an actual hole dug into the ground in the former coal cellar in the basement of the house, which guests may enter into for realistic photo ops. Upon entering the interactive well set, guests will be greeted by sounds of dripping water along with actual audio clips from the film. The well features many of the gruesome markings from the movie, including bloody fingernail scratches along the wall. Costumes for cosplay provided.

Buffalo Bill's House, which offers private overnight stays throughout the year, is also offering limited guided house tours for Halloween weekend, Oct. 28th – 30th. The exclusive tours are $65.00 per person. An intimate group of guests will be able to visit not just the interactive well set but the home in its entirety, including the sprawling property. Tours are conducted by Buffalo Bill's House owner and last approximately two hours.

"Goodbye Horses," the haunting song that plays during the famous Buffalo Bill dance scene, goes on autoplay, upon entering the basement.
