Market Overview (2017-2027)

Forecast CAGR (2022-2027): 5.3%

Non-alcoholic beverages are widely consumed in hotels, restaurants, healthcare institutes, and educational centres, among others. The increasing sale of non-alcoholic beverages among tourists, students, and working-professionals, is driving the market growth. Also, the increasing number of stalls and street food providers across the emerging economies are propelling the demand for minerals water and carbonated drinks, thereby increasing the market demand.

The increasing footfall in bars and pubs are fostering the popularity of non-alcoholic beers, soft drinks, cocktails, and fruit juices, among others, which is adding to the growth of non-alcoholic beverages market. Further, the increasing inclination towards non-alcoholic beverages to quit alcohol or reduce the consumption of whiskey or vodka, is a major driving factor of the market.

During the forecast period, the Asia Pacific region is expected to account for a significant share in the market owing to the large population base across India and China. The rapid urbanisation, rising standard of living, and strong foothold of major beverage producing companies in the region are some of the crucial driving factors of the non-alcoholic beverages market.

Meanwhile, the Middle East and Africa is anticipated to register a considerable growth in the coming years because alcoholic beverages such as wine and beer are forbidden in this region. In this regard, the scope of expansion of non-alcoholic beverages is high. Moreover, the expansion of non-alcoholic beverages in this region is likely to lead to rapid innovations to boost the availability of innovative flavours.
