Market Summary: -

Xerostomia is a condition of dry mouth. It is a condition wherein the salivary glands lose their capacity to produce the desired amount of saliva in the mouth. But this isn't the sole reason. Xerostomia may occur even in cases of not in taking required fluids, sleeping with mouth open, exposing the body against hot weather for a long time, medication side effects etc. Conditions like diabetes and HIV aids can have an impact on the salivary glands. Thus, this can also lead to xerostomia. Menopause is another reason in women that can lead to xerostomia.

Increasing adoption of chemotherapy and radio therapy in the cancer treatment process can damage the salivary glands. Thus, this has become a leading reason for individuals demanding xerostomia therapeutics. Rise in the patients with diabetes across the globe impact the salivary glands. Also, consuming medicines can have a range of side effects wherein one of them is dry mouth. Thus, people depending more and more and medicines are in a way contributing to the growth of the xerostomia therapeutics market. Rising resourcefulness and awareness of the same is also promoting the growth of the market.

On the flip side, Finger-prick Autologous Blood treatment can prove to be a restraint in the growth of this market. Finger-prick Autologous Blood (FAB) is an emerging treatment process that is regarded as a better and novel alternative to treat and tackle dry mouth. However, low level of awareness about the same in underdeveloped countries too is hampering the market for the forecast period mentioned above.
