

SERVPRO Accelerates its Services in Response to Unprecedented Ian Damage

Economic damage at well over $100 billion

GALLATIN, TENNESSEE, UNITED STATES, October 12, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In the aftermath of Hurricane Ian, many things are clear. This storm caused significant damage and recovery will be long and tedious. From communities being turned to rubble to immense amounts of water damage, now is the time for the people of Florida and the Carolina's to get a helping hand.

SERVPRO's Disaster Recovery Team has been deployed to the affected areas bringing hundreds of crews from across the nation to help with recovery efforts. Response times are expected to be longer than usual due to the extreme volume of the storm damage. "Hurricane Ian is one of the largest and most impactful storms Florida (and the US) has experienced in recent years and possibly all of its history," said Mike Stahl, Chief Marketing Officer, SERVPRO. "We have mobilized more teams and resources than in any other recent time -- to address the damage and remediation needs in Florida and the Carolinas."
