Market Overview (2017-2027)

- Forecast CAGR (2022-2027): 10.1%

The global market growth can be attributed to the rising prevalence of allergic disorders and their burden across the globe. The healthcare system is burdened by complex allergies with increased morbidity, which drives research and development in this sector for the introduction of novel medicines.

A rise in the prevalence of asthma and allergic respiratory illnesses is another consequence of rising air pollution, both indoors and outdoors. Few macroeconomic factors such as increasing pollution levels, changing eating habits, and increased consumption of alcohol are resulting in increased skin and other allergies, further propelling the need for allergy immunotherapy.
