With the growing popularity of the Internet, broadband access has become a vital source of information to the people of the planet. There are many rural areas that lack broadband access and there are still many countries that aren't served. Video applications consume almost two-thirds all Internet traffic, which is why there are growing numbers of subscribers to video streaming (Netflix and YouTube, Amazon Video, etc.). This increases the demand for high-speed internet and drives the growth in the global broadband satellite market.
