

Prista Corporation Announces Two New White Papers on Healthcare Performance Improvement

"Performance Improvement Post-Covid: Applying Lessons Learned During the Pandemic" and "Unlocking the Secret to Strategic Success" are available for download.

AUSTIN, TX, USA, November 28, 2022 /EINPresswire.com/ --It is well known that COVID-19 created many issues for the healthcare industry, many unique to the pandemic. However, many systemic challenges were not pandemicinduced. Rather they long existed and only surfaced or became exacerbated by the public health crisis and operational changes induced during it. Although the alarm was sounded on major issues like healthcare worker burnout and information siloing years before 2020, they did not become apparent to the public until the last two and a half years.

In the first of two new white papers, "Performance Improvement Post-Covid: Applying Lessons Learned During the Pandemic", Prista Corporation President and Co-Founder, Don Jarrell, looks at a number of lessons learned. These include factors contributing to staff burnout in hospitals, four causes of information siloing, how to break down silos, and why automated, integrative technology is the missing piece of the solution.

The second white paper builds on the first. In "Unlocking the Secret to Strategic Success", Mr. Jarrell makes the case for what must be done to make a strategic shift leading to success with healthcare Performance Improvement. This white paper presents four antagonists to continuous improvement efforts that directly affect almost all healthcare provider organizations. It concludes with one very clear and immediately doable step forward on the path to healthcare performance improvement.

Both white papers are available for download on Prista's website.
