This patent (11395620) opens a new era in our understanding of the brain”

Rhona Morris

The patent discusses methods and systems for transformation between eye images and digital images, manipulating the image and then sending back to the brain.

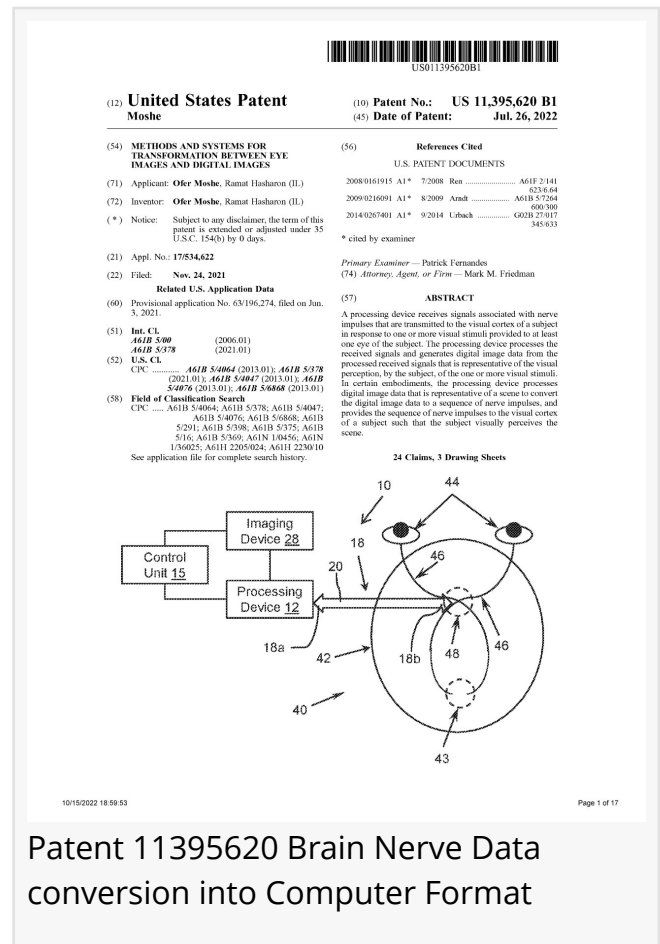

The technology that the patent (number 11395620) depicts is converting eye nerve protocol into computer format/protocol. It can then manipulate the image transmitted by the eye which includes the use of external images. The manipulated data is sent back to the brain. For example, this can enable changing the background, dress color or adding a moving object into the image. All this can then be seen by as regular vision. Viewed images can be merged with background movies or replaced all together, as an example with camera vision.

Aktevy has until recently focused on commercial business activities. The company capitalizes on its long-term relationships with its customers with the purpose of introducing them to added value products. Ofer is also the person behind the “Dark Matter” theory, a new approach to how our universe is structured. His assertion is that all is based on one particle, the “Dark Matter”, that has no attributes. Ofer’s theory is that everything including energy, particles, forces, gravity etc. are created by propagation in the “Dark Matter” 4th dimension (or Nth dimension) through our three dimensions.
