A digital video server is a device that stores digital video or compressed video content and streams it to a display device when requested. It can either be integrated into other devices such as set-top boxes, DVD players, or personal computers, or it can be a stand-alone device. The rising demand for high-quality video content and the need for real-time monitoring are some of the key factors driving the growth of the DVS market. The increasing adoption of IP cameras and network video recorders (NVRs) is also contributing to the market growth. However, the high cost of deployment is restraining the market growth.

The growing demand for high-definition (HD) and ultra-high-definition (UHD) content is one of the major factors driving the growth of the digital video server market. The increasing adoption of streaming services such as Netflix, Amazon Prime Video, and Hulu is also fueling the demand for digital video servers. North America is expected to hold the largest market share in 2018, followed by Europe and Asia-Pacific. The growing demand for high-definition (HD) and 4K content in North America is fueling the growth of this market in the region.
