This three day, in-person event will leverage the extensive expertise of regional and global merchants like Nintendo, Google, AirAsia, Netflix, ShopBack, Expedia, and Microsoft to offer unique networking opportunities and informative presentations on eCommerce topics critical to the region.

"We've been working hard over the last year to bring our wealth of resources to eCommerce merchants and solution providers in APAC," said Julie Ferguson, CEO of the Merchant Risk Council. "Our first Singapore conference is the result of all that work. We're excited to provide these unique networking and educational opportunities to a large community of forward-thinking eCommerce professionals in this rapidly expanding market."

The Merchant Risk Council is a global membership organization connecting eCommerce fraud and payments professionals through educational programs, online forums, career development, conferences, and networking events.

Though this is the MRC's first conference in Asia-Pacific, the organization is not new to the region. The last year has seen many local merchant-focused events and extensive advocacy efforts on behalf of merchants in APAC, such as working with the Reserve Bank of India to extend their recently implemented card payment regulation compliance deadline.

"We've developed so many important partnerships with merchants and eCommerce organizations in the region," said Ferguson. "One benefit from those collaborative efforts is an exceptional speaker lineup for this conference.

We have a wide variety of merchants, solution providers, and law enforcement agencies covering topics like fraud and risk mitigation strategies unique to this diverse region, the latest in regional compliance and payment method adoption, and so much more. Nobody should miss this opportunity to hear directly from the experts shaping the future of eCommerce in APAC and beyond."
