Immunomodulators are a group of drugs that help in regulating immune function by modifying immune system's response to a threat and are used alone or in combination with other drugs to treat non-response, prevent recurrence after surgery or optimize effect of a biological drug. Autoimmune and inflammatory immunomodulators are rapidly gaining traction due to rapid advancements in medicine and high prevalence of autoimmune and inflammatory diseases such as inflammatory bowel disease, rheumatoid arthritis, and cancer among others.

Factors such as rising geriatric population, improving healthcare infrastructure, increasing healthcare and research spending, and high focus on developing novel and advanced immunomodulators are expected to drive global market growth during the forecast period.

However, high initial investments, rising concerns about the adverse effects of these drugs, and availability of alternative drug therapies are some key factors that can hamper overall market growth during the forecast period.

Biologics Segment to Account for Largest Revenue Share:

The biologics segment is expected to account for largest revenue share between 2017 and 2028. Factors such as increasing prevalence of autoimmune disorders, growing preference for biopharmaceuticals, high focus on introducing novel therapies, and rising investments in research and development activities are expected to drive segment revenue growth during the forecast period.
